Fund commentary

- Portfolio well protected from sharp spike in interest rates
- Credit markets soften, but long term fundamentals intact
- Well positioned to take advantage of near term volatility

Market interest rates rose sharply in October as more investors adopted our view that the recent rise in inflation may not be so transitory. Australian 10-year bond yields rose by ~0.50% during the month to over 2% - representing a ~5% fall in value in just one month!

Our effectively zero exposure to fixed term interest rates meant we were well protected.

Performance was slightly negative during the month on broad credit market weakness, as investors became fearful of how global central banks may respond to inflation.

The Fund's holding in bank subordinated bonds was softer on weaker credit markets and investor concerns regarding supply. We believe supply will be easily absorbed, and that attractive valuation anomalies relative to senior debt should see the investment add meaningfully to performance over time.

Our holding in Spanish property bonds detracted from performance in October on market weakness and changes to regulations relating to social housing. We spoke to both companies and are of the view that the new regulations will have little impact on their revenues, and thus markets have over-reacted somewhat.

The Fund currently has a considerable portion of its assets in cash and low volatility short dated bonds. Thus, we are well positioned to take advantage of new valuation anomalies that present themselves. We will be maintaining effectively zero interest rate exposure, to insulate the portfolio from the rising interest rate environment.
